

DON'T USE CROWN CANS

If you are buying cans of Molson, Labatt, Coors, Budweiser, Moosehead, Steam Whistle, Creemore and other beers, they are probably made by scabs.

What is a scab?

A scab is someone who takes another person's job during a strike. Big companies love scabs because they lower everyone's wages and put more money in the pockets of the rich.

Buying beer in bottles, and not cans, can help average working people.

We work at Crown Holdings' packaging plant in Toronto making high-quality cans for big beer brands. In 2012, we won Crown's "Plant of the Year" award for our productivity.

On Sept. 6, 2013, Crown forced us on strike by demanding up to 42% pay cuts for new hires and other unfair take-backs, while our CEO made $6,000/hour! Crown hired scabs to do our jobs.

Even if we agree to huge, unjust cuts, the company wants to keep the scabs and 75% of us will lose our jobs.

What kind of company attacks and gets rid of its most productive workers?

Crown is a greedy American company with over 140 plants worldwide.

WE NEED YOUR HELP TO WIN THIS FIGHT. BUY BEER IN BOTTLES NOT IN SCAB CANS, AND STAND UP FOR CANADIAN WORKERS.
